

'Juicers' paid to charge scooters

Scooter-sharing companies Lime and Bird subcontract people to refuel devices for profit

By Vicente Vera
NEWS EDITOR

Having finished his day shift as a maintenance worker in downtown, San Jose resident Mario Rosas began his collections at San Jose State in the dead of night.

He tugged at his truck bed extender to make sure it was sturdy enough to handle the overflow of scooters that were about to hang over its edges.

But once he parked south of 7th Street Plaza, Rosas' only concern was bringing home enough money to fill up his gas tank.

Thankfully, he had enough room in the back of his pickup truck to reel in more than $100 worth of scooters in just one round trip.

Rosas takes home and charges scooters companies like Lime and Bird released onto campus in early 2018.

Now describing it as a lucrative side gig, the father of two said he found the obscure employment opportunity through a mobile game on his phone.

"I was playing a game that had the advertisement," said Rosas.

Most people took advantage of these pay-to-use scooters to zip through San Jose, but the devices also benefit people like Rosas who moonlight as "juicers."

Juicers scout populated areas like SJSU for dead or

VICENTE VERA | SPARTAN DAILY

San Jose resident Mario Rosas stands over two dozen scooters packed into the back of his pick-up truck.

dying scooters to "harvest," meaning they recharge the battery for a $6 profit per device.

They can have up to 25 scooters at a time, but are not limited to any quantity throughout the day, according to Rosas.

"Usually I get anywhere from 40 to 70 scooters a day," he said. "I can make $300 on a good day, so people can definitely make a living out of this."

However, Rosas was not alone in his hunt. He ran into two colleagues in the middle of 7th Street Plaza that night.

They exchanged nods and conversation underneath the street light as if it were a pit stop for juicers.

The oldest among them noticed Rosas was having trouble scanning the QR code of a scooter and asked if he could scan it for himself instead.

The QR code worked on his iPhone, so Rosas gave him the scooter and with it, he rode off into the night.

"There goes $6," he said. "I think I just need to update the app."

The other man Rosas encountered was Jeff Widergren, an SJSU electrical engineering alumnus who left his job at Microsoft to start his own company.

Widergren then awaited patent approvals for a proposed app he claimed would eliminate online cheating. He said one of the app's investors supported him financially during this time.

But when they dropped him, Widergren was left

“

Usually I get anywhere from 40 to 70 scooters a day.

Mario Rosas
Lime scooter "juicer"

without a steady source of income. He burned through the remainder of his money and started working a variety of odd jobs to replenish his lost savings.

"I did OK at Fry's, Sprouts and Macy's but lost all of those jobs because of my drinking," said the class of 1987 graduate. "I go on binges sometimes."

One of Widergren's roommates suggested he invest in motorized scooter chargers and become a juicer. He said he fell in love with the job instantly after Lime accepted his application.

"This job fits my needs and is fun, it's like a hide-and-go seek," said Widergren.

Though Widergren and Rosas only knew each other through casual run-ins, they spoke like good friends when bragging about who took home the most scooters.

Widergren won that night. "I started looking around

RIDE | Page 2

Bryan's Billiards opens with style

By Javier Velez
STAFF WRITER

Bryan's Billiards, formerly known as Nguyen Trai Billiards, has finished its remodeling process under new owner Nery Aguiar. It had its grand opening on Feb. 3.

The remodeling process for the before-to-after outcome was noticeable. The cue sticks, balls, tabletops and even the bathroom were all in great condition with that "brand-new" smell.

Not only were the tables brand-new, but different types of tabletops were installed. Now, 3-Ball and 8-Ball tables cover the majority of the space in the property.

The new "3-Ball" tables differ from "8-ball" tables because there are no pockets in the table.

Everyday use over the years left the tables in Nguyen Trai Billiards with noticeably faded felt surfaces. Nguyen Trai Billiards allowed smoking in its facility and had strong support from Vietnamese Americans in the San Jose community.

While starting a new business is never easy, taking over from a different environment like Nguyen Trai Billiards was a tough transition, according to Aguiar.

He said his first change

POOL | Page 2

CAMPUS IMAGE

Dancing in the dark

MAURICIO LA PLANTE | SPARTAN DAILY

Behavioral science senior Zaida Aleman and SJSU alumnus Shakun Jain perform on stage for the Chicanx Spring Welcome.

KUNAL MEHTA | SPARTAN DAILY

Motorized scooters lay on top of each other at one of two SJSU scooter parking locations recently added.

Scooter-sharing hit with regulations

By Eduardo Teixeira
A&E EDITOR

In an effort to reduce the clutter of scooters, San Jose State installed two motorized scooter parking lots. One lot was placed near Dudley Moorhead Hall and the other on South 4th Street behind Washington Square Hall.

The spots were also a response to new mandates placed by the city of San Jose on motorized scooter-sharing companies.

Though not every city with scooter-sharing devices faces the same circumstances as San Jose, Mayor Sam Liccardo took a unique approach in dealing with scooter laws.

Liccardo and Mayor Ted Winterer of Santa Monica sent a joint letter to Travis VanderZanden, the CEO of Bird Scooters, requesting that the company implement safety precautions for its devices.

"As progressive, innovation-friendly mayors, we do not like to pit all-or-nothing regulatory policies against innovative technologies," they stated. "So we encourage you to join us in seeking another path – one that will better protect the safety of our residents and help your company avoid the existential risk of bans."

The "all-or-nothing" policy Liccardo and Winterer referred to was implemented on campuses like Cleveland State University.

Following the death of a 21-year-old woman in Cleveland, the university banned motorized scooters and their respective scooter-sharing companies on

MOTORIZED | Page 2

Opinion

Greek life does not guarantee best college life

Page 3

Sports

Rugby team hopes to win conference

Page 4

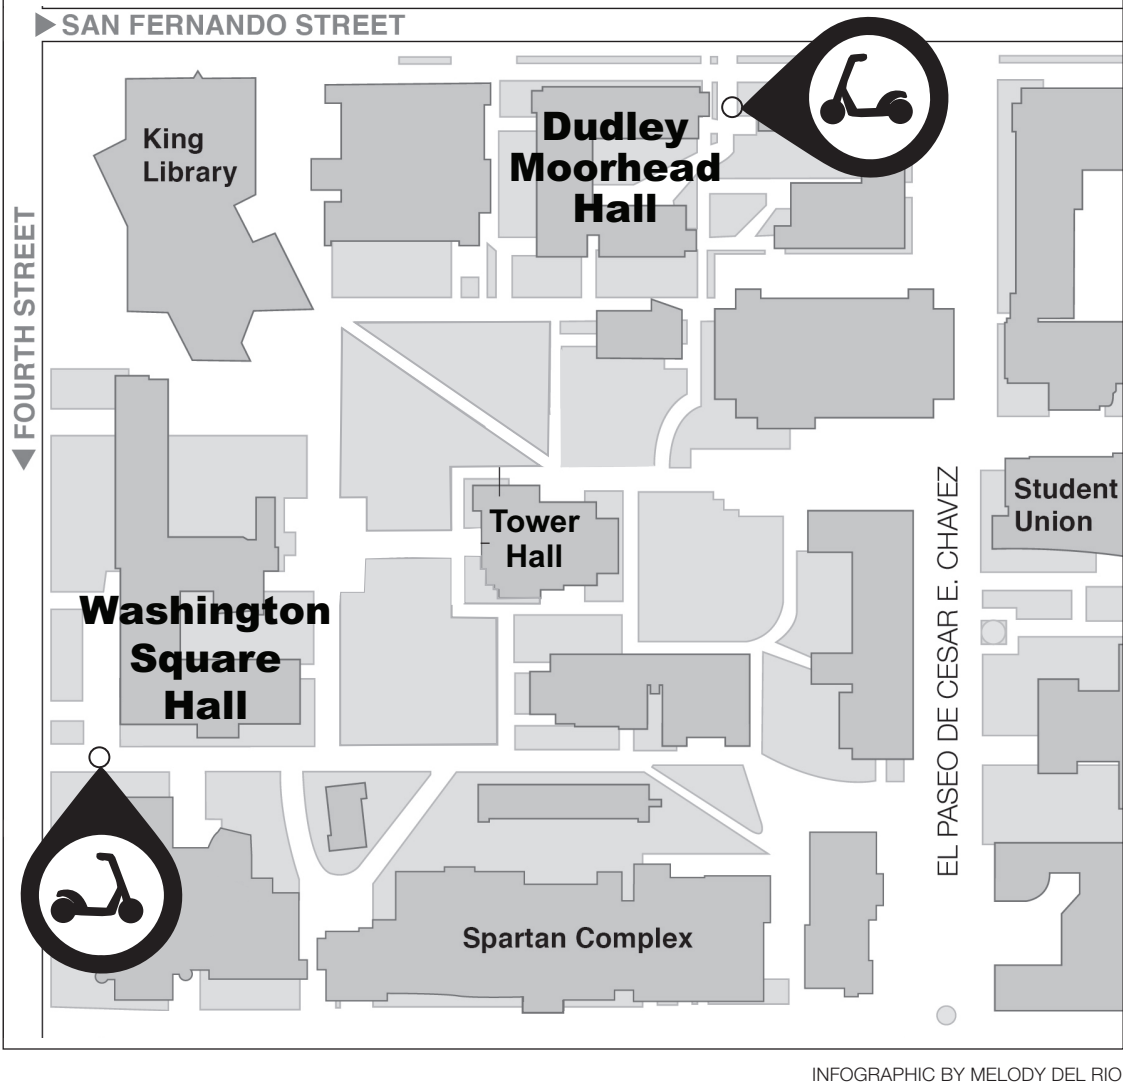

A&E

Feathers of Fury hosts Downtown pillow fight

Page 6

Motorized scooter parking lots at San Jose State

MOTORIZED

Continued from page 1

its campus.

Students at SJSU noticed the lack of local safety precautions taken by scooter-sharing companies.

“I never see anyone wearing a helmet,” said undeclared freshman Christian Drake.

SJSU students have also taken notice of the sheer number of these motorized scooters around campus.

“They’re everywhere,” said business freshman Ashur Wong. “They’re on the ground and in a variety of places.”

Liccardo, along with City Council members Raul Peralez and Devora Davis, issued safety guidelines for companies to follow in an effort to reduce the problems noticed by SJSU students and San Jose residents alike.

Geofencing is referenced in the guidelines, which is GPS tracking to enforce a maximum speed on the scooters depending on its location.

San Jose representatives would also like companies to share user data with the city in order to understand frequent routes and build infrastructure around that.

The infrastructure the city is hoping to build for these scooters includes suitable bike lanes in all commonly used streets and more designated parking lots for the scooters.

These guidelines are more liberal compared to the route other cities have taken when dealing with the motorized scooter epidemic.

The city of Phoenix for example, banned scooter-sharing companies and their devices from the entire city.

So far, the new parking lots at SJSU have not been put to use the way the school intended. Many students on campus are unaware that the lots even exist.

“They put up parking lots for them?” asked kinesiology freshman Kasey Javier. “I had no idea, where are they?”

Scooter-sharing companies such as Lime and Bird are not only behind on establishing dedicated scooter parking lots, but they also have yet to begin implementing geofencing within their devices.

According to Drake, a frequent user of Bird scooters, the company has so far only reduced the maximum speed on the devices.

“Yeah I used to be able to hit 20 [miles per hour] on those things,” he said. “They slowed them down yeah. They’re still fast, though.”

It is unclear at this time whether more safety measures will be applied. The city of San Jose has yet to respond to the lack of execution on the scooter-sharing company’s part.

Follow Eduardo on Twitter | @eduardo_teix97

POOL

Continued from page 1

was the smoking environment.

“During our first weekend, I was surprised that cup of noodles and popcorn were being sold so fast,” Aguiar said. “I am assuming the cold weather played a part.”

Although Aguiar’s place has a foundation for its menu, “the plan is to keep adding items as time goes on,” according to Aguiar.

“We kept items from [Nguyen] like Vietnamese coffee and sandwiches,” Aguiar said. “Eventually, we will be selling seafood on the weekends as a promotion.”

“Most of the time when I go to a pool hall, it’s later in the night with my friends, we have already eaten, something that would go great with alcohol would be nice,” said computer engineering junior Jonathan Beard.

Aguiar has ideas about possible promotions to bring in customers in the near future, but he said not having an alcohol license is slowing the process down.

“We are working on a promotion once we are able to serve alcohol to bring in couples. Bring in your girlfriend and she gets half off her drinks,” said Aguiar. “That way we can double on numbers in attendance.”

“Price is definitely a huge factor for me. I would prefer playing at cheaper prices and I am not bothered by music so I do not have to worry about that,” said Darren Wong, a software engineer senior and president of SJSU’s pool club.

Price is a common answer when students were asked what important factors take place when deciding on a place to practice their shot.

“A lot of places, the average rate I’ve seen is about $8 an hour. I’ve seen some places do $10 to $12, especially if they are starting up, which is a pretty big deterrent,” Beard said. “You have to really have a lot of other attractions and really good food if you are going to be doing that.”

Billiards is an international game and has different environments around the world. However, the concept of the game does not change – making your balls in the pockets.

Follow Javier on Twitter | @JavyALVZ408

JAVIER VELEZ | SPARTAN DAILY

San Jose resident Jonathan Carrasco takes his shot at Bryan’s Billiards.

Correction

On Tuesday, Feb. 12, the Spartan Daily published an article titled “Officers bid for SJSU police chief position” where Gina Haynes di Napoli was misidentified. Spartan Daily regrets this error.

RIDE

Continued from page 1

earlier in the day, like 4 or 5 p.m.,” he said. “Plus, I just learned how to stack scooters on top of each other, so now I can ride back to my apartment with a lot more of them.”

Without a car to drive, Widergren can only take home as many scooters as he can hold on his own.

He keeps the scooters lined up in the hallway leading to the kitchen of his cramped apartment. All of them plugged into multi-outlet power strips spread across the floor like land mines.

They become like pieces of furniture when left to charge next to the television overnight.

Nevertheless, Widergren said his roommates have no problem with his operation.

“It pays more than the retail [jobs] did,” he said.

Rosas and Widergren collectively take home more than 100 scooters a day, yet it is only a fraction of the total amount roaming in San Jose.

According to John Ristow, acting director of the city’s department of transportation, there are approximately 1,700 motorized scooters in

“

I just learned how to stack scooters on top of each other, so now I can ride back to my apartment with a lot more of them.

Jeff Widergren
SJSU electrical engineering alumnus

the city.

Back on campus, at 10 p.m., the rain was hitting Rosas in all directions while his wife waited inside the truck for him to load up the scooters.

The trunk was brimmed with overlapping scooters, barely leaving enough room for Rosas to look through his rearview mirror.

He pulled at his truck bed extender one last time. Now, his only concern was arriving home to say good night to his children.

“My son says he wants to play soccer for Stanford or Berkeley,” said Rosas. “It would be nice if he stayed close to home.”

Brian Darby, an adult education instructor in Santa Clara, told the San Jose City Council on Dec. 18 that charging scooters could be a great vocational opportunity for people with intellectual disabilities as well.

“A lot of work can be given to them and they can learn how to manage these things,” Darby said. “They can bring the scooters home, clean them up and charge them.”

At the same city council meeting, Vice Mayor Magdalena Carrasco also spoke highly of both Lime and Bird. In particular, she thanked them for facilitating a “shared economy.”

Carrasco said she recalled seeing SJSU students take home multiple scooters. She later realized they were harvesting them for money.

“I know it’s [the company’s] model and it works for them, but it also works for the community,” Carrasco said regarding the employment opportunities offered by Lime and Bird. “It’s nice to be able to share the wealth.”

Follow Vicente on Twitter | @VicenteSJSU

Spartan Daily

EXECUTIVE EDITOR
NICHOLAS ZAMORA

MANAGING EDITOR
JANA KADAH

EXECUTIVE PRODUCER
KAYLA FLORES

NEWS EDITORS
VICENTE VERA
HUAN XUN CHAN

A&E EDITOR
EDUARDO TEIXEIRA

OPINION EDITOR
HUGO VERA

SPORTS EDITOR
LINDSEY BOYD

PHOTO EDITOR
JOHANNA MARTIN

MULTIMEDIA EDITOR
KELSEY VALLE

SPECIAL PROJECT EDITORS
WILLIAM DELA CRUZ
MARCI SUELA

COPY EDITORS
MYLA LA BINE
WINONA RAJAMOHAN
JESSICA BALLARDO
WILLIAM DELA CRUZ

GRAPHICS EDITOR
MELODY DEL RIO

CONSULTANT
SARAH KLIEVES

SENIOR STAFF WRITERS
JACKIE CONTRERAS
GABRIEL MUNGARAY
NORA RAMIREZ

STAFF WRITERS
JAILEANE AGUILAR
ALYSON CHUYANG
ROMAN CONTRERAS
CINDY CUELLAR
VICTORIA FRANCO
JOZY PRABHU
CALEB RAMOS
COURTNEY VASQUEZ
JAVIER VELEZ
CORA WILSON
OLIVIA WRAY
ADAM YOSHIKAWA
KUNAL MEHTA
JONATHAN AUSTIN
MAURICIO LA PLANTE

PRODUCTION CHIEF
MIKE CORPOS

NEWS ADVISER
RICHARD CRAIG

ADVERTISING ADVISER
TIM HENDRICK

ADVERTISING DIRECTOR
NICOLAS SISTO

CREATIVE DIRECTOR
MARCI SUELA

ADVERTISING STAFF
NABIIHAH BURNEY
RICKY ISIDRO CARDENAS
ZHUO CHEN
JUAN DE ANDA
JOSEPH MAYEN
JAZLYN KAY REYES
DANICA SAMANIEGO
CAROLINA ZEPEDA

CONTACT US

EDITORIAL

PHONE:
(408) 924-5577

EMAIL:
SPARTANDAILY@GMAIL.COM

ADVERTISING

PHONE:
(408) 924-3270

EMAIL:
SPARTANDAILYADVERTISING@GMAIL.COM

College doesn't need to be 'Animal House'

Adam Yoshikawa
STAFF WRITER

Fraternalities and sororities promise to give students the “full college experience.” But what defines the “full college experience?” Does achieving the most out of college in a social sense require joining a fraternity or sorority? According to sociology junior Manuel Cobarrubias, the full college experience is “getting an education and having fun doing it.” But what is it more

Interfraternity Council (IFC), the National Panhellenic Council (NPHC), the Panhellenic Council (PHC) and the United Sorority and Fraternity Council (USFC). The fraternity and sororities’ official mission statement on the SJSU site reads “We aspire to facilitate and develop a community of genuine connections, promote the pursuit of high achievements, and instill a dedication to service and justice, all in comes down to the fundamentals, a student’s college experience is whatever they make of it. Like many students, I recall being approached by several fraternities during their recruiting sessions. Fraternity recruiters told me things such as “You will get the full college experience, bro” and “Go Greek. It’ll open up your networking.” While I don’t deny that joining a fraternity is a good way to broaden one’s social and professional network, I still have lingering doubts as to what the full college experience really is. “When I joined, [Greek life] gave me an opportunity to branch out and meet new people,” SJSU management senior Gerald Bernales said. Bernales is the manager of the university’s Alpha Kappa Psi chapter. “I get to see new perspectives on how people interact with each other and how everything kinda works,” Bernales added. “The full college experience is whatever you can get out of it, I mean you’re paying to go here, you’re given all these resources and a lot of people don’t take advantage of it,” said business management freshman Matthew Hoak of Sigma Nu. “You know, a lot of

ADAM YOSHIKAWA | SPARTAN DAILY

Mechanical engineering junior Joel Maniago carries letters belonging to the Alpha Kappa Omega fraternity for a recruiting session at the 7th Street Plaza.

When it comes down to the fundamentals, a student’s college experience is whatever they make of it.

about? The fun or an actual education? SJSU fraternity and sorority members believe in having both. According to San Jose State’s website, SJSU has more than 40 Greek organizations that are members of four governing councils. These include the an effort to elevate the student experience.” The media often depicts the ideal “college experience” as a series of wild nights filled with drinking and partying with one’s “bros” and “sisters.” In reality, there is no right or wrong way to attend college. When it people go here, get their degree and leave. I mean if you’re gonna do it you might as well do it with your whole heart,” Hoak added. Another concept I found interesting is that fraternities and sororities require their members to maintain a certain grade point average and to report their grades regularly. These reports must be issued to both the student’s respective Greek organization as well as the administration. According to the school’s website depicting the overall cumulative grades of the spring 2018 semester, the average GPA among Greek members was 3.0. The average GPA for a San Jose State student is a 3.4, according to the California State University site. I find this impressive given that most houses have about 20 members each. After talking to many different members of the various Greek chapters at SJSU, I now believe that Greek life opens up your social and professional networking chances. Partying and drinking are just some things that come with it. The chapters are a tight knit family who watch over each other, but when it comes to the “full college experience,” their version of it still makes my eyebrow raise when hearing the phrase. Maybe I’m stuck in the mud on this, but I’m convinced that immersing oneself into Greek life on campus is not the only way to gain the total college experience. Rather, it’s one of the many types of experiences. What you come out with, no matter what groups you choose, that is your college experience.

Follow Adam on Instagram
@yoshi_kawa_

INTERNATIONAL COFFEE HOUR

Learn about different cultures, meet friends, and have fun!

*Coffee provided every week, lunch provided the 1st week of the month.

JOIN US ON MONDAYS, 12-1PM WELLNESS CENTER, RM 122 2/4-5/6

SJSU | INTERNATIONAL STUDENT AND SCHOLAR SERVICES

SJSU | COUNSELING AND PSYCHOLOGICAL SERVICES

SJSU | INTERNATIONAL GATEWAYS

*Counseling & Psychological Services is a department within the Division of Student Affairs. All services are FREE, and only for SJSU Students. This event is wheelchair accessible. Individuals requiring Sign-Language Interpreters, Real-time captioners, or other accommodations should contact Counseling and Psychological Services at (408) 924-5910 or counseling.services@sjsu.edu as soon as possible.

spartunes

Spartan Daily editors' favorite love songs

NOTHING CAN CHANGE THIS LOVE

Sam Cooke

selected by Nick Zamora

BABY I NEED YOUR LOVING

Four Tops

selected by Jana Kadah

TEENAGE LOVE AFFAIR

Alicia Keys

selected by Kayla Flores

MELTING

Kali Uchis

selected by Vicente Vera

ETERNAL LOVE

Michael Learns to Rock

selected by Huan Xun Chan

GOD ONLY KNOWS

The Beach Boys

selected by Eduardo Teixeira

HOW DEEP IS YOUR LOVE

Bee Gees

selected by Hugo Vera

GREEN EYES

Cold Play

selected by Lindsey Boyd

ROS

Mac Miller

selected by Johanna Martin

WITH YOU

Chris Brown

selected by Kelsey Valle

NEVER TEAR US APART

INXS

selected by Myla La Bine

MAGIC

Coldplay

selected by Winona Rajamohan

MAKE YOU FEEL MY LOVE

Adele

selected by Jessica Ballardo

YOUR MAN

Josh Turner

selected by Melody del Rio

SURFER GIRL

Beach Boys

selected by Mike Corpsos

Listen to this playlist on Spotify:

https://spoti.fi/2POfuWY

Saturday is rugby day for SJSU’s club team

By Alyson Chuyang
STAFF WRITER

Rain poured down on San Jose State’s CEFCU Stadium Saturday afternoon, and the floodlights illuminated the field for an aggressive match.

SJSU’s women’s rugby team hosted CSU Monterey Bay and won its third home game.

The 42 women that make up SJSU’s women’s rugby team compete in the West Coast Division II Women’s Conference, which includes California state and private universities and University of Nevada, Reno.

This season, the team has won all three home games and finished with one tie and one loss in its conference. They tied in the conference with first-place team Saint Mary’s (41-41) and are hoping to qualify for playoffs.

James Fonda, the newly appointed head coach, spoke well of the team despite its recruitment struggles from the season before. He said the team barely had enough girls to put the necessary 15 players out on the field last year.

“This year we finally got some really good recruiting from Tiffany Perez, and so we got a new coaching staff, and we’ve done pretty well.

Members of the 2019 San Jose State rugby team raise their fists in the air as they break from a team huddle.

PHOTO COURTESY OF TIFFANY PEREZ

The girls are having fun and that’s what it’s really about,” Fonda said.

Because of her extensive recruitment efforts, current club president Tiffany Perez transformed the club from not having enough women to play in a match, to more than enough for two teams to switch out for games.

Perez joined the team last year and within that year of playing she was voted president for her background in recreation management, which she is currently studying as a senior.

Her passion for the club drives her to be the best leader she can be for the team.

“Our team has gone from a small rugby club to a student organization that provides more than rugby,” Perez said. “Rugby is such an amazing sport with respectable morals and values that come with it and I think my favorite part is being a voice for that.”

Though Perez is graduating this spring, she has a vision for the future of the club.

“I am already setting up some plans for the girls this summer and next semester to supplement their training with a physical trainer, a mental-ity trainer and also some sponsors,” she said.

“We are raising and supporting educated, intelligent and hard-working ladies and I know my girls will succeed on the field and in life because of the program that we have.”

For women interested in joining but unsure about the level of intensity rugby brings, the current players confirm the team caters to women of all athletic backgrounds.

From graduate students who have played their whole college career to women who have no experience at all, the rugby team’s coaches and captains assure that everyone has a chance to play.

“If you want to get better, they expect you to make that effort,” third year Tyra Furtado said.

“But they’re not going to not play you because you’re not as good. As long as you show up to practice and you show that you’re trying, they will put you in.”

Furtado came from a very athletic background and was involved in many high school sports. She quickly discovered rugby is her favorite.

“This combined everything that I loved: strength, running and endurance,” said Furtado. “And on top of that, you get the sisterhood and you make all these new friends.”

The team will play its last home game of the season on March 9 against University of Nevada, Reno and like all the women on the team say, “Saturday is rugby day!”

Follow Alyson on Twitter
@alysoncy

Cheerleading is not just a sport for women

By Roman Contreras
and Cindy Cuellar
STAFF WRITERS

Contrary to popular belief, cheerleading is not the feminine sport people may think it is.

The Los Angeles Rams made headlines because of their inclusion of what many believe was the first male cheerleader in Super Bowl LIII. Although, this is not the groundbreaking event some are making it out to be.

“That’s actually not the first time male cheerleaders have been in the Super Bowl, the Baltimore Ravens have a stunt team and they did it in Super Bowl XLVII,” said senior San Jose State cheerleader Ryan Hale.

It was not until the 1900s that cheerleading became a female dominated sport. Prior to modern day practices, cheerleading teams were all male, and they were called “yell leaders,” according to Spartan Daily records.

“It actually started with guys, and when you get to the college level it’s dominated by men. You have the best teams in the world like Kentucky or Alabama, their teams have like 12 guys and like 10 girls,” said Hale.

Before creating assumptions about male cheerleaders, it is important to note all the different areas cheerleading can encompass. Hale mentioned that there is much more to cheer than pom poms, skirts and dancing.

Performing stunts like tumbling, lifting and tossing people in the air takes incredible strength and agility that only an athlete could possess.

“I think anyone who does like a day in the life of a cheerleader would be like holy moley, this is insane,” said cheer coach Heather Limosnero.

Limosnero cheered for SJSU for about four years before deciding she wanted to come back and coach for the same team.

As far as coaching is concerned, Limosnero does not discriminate.

“I try to train them all the same, whether it’s a

It [cheerleading] actually started with guys, and when you get to the college level it’s dominated by men.

Ryan Hale
SJSU Cheerleader

male or a female, I look at the group as a whole and say okay here’s your skill level as a group as compared to an individual,” said Limosnero.

“Sometimes it’s easier to coach the males because their muscles might be more developed than a female’s, but I think that’s the only difference” she added.

With the culture of acceptance in the West, Limosnero feels the West Coast is behind in terms of cheerleading. She says she finds it odd that there are not more male cheerleaders here.

Sophomore aspiring business major Gerardo

Mendoza said he grew up surrounded by male cheerleaders.

“I went to an all boys school so we called them ‘yell leaders,’ and each time we scored points at a football game they would do one push up for each point.”

Competing in cheer at the college level is a big accomplishment.

“College [cheer] is basically like the top, like we can do things that no all-star team is legally allowed to do,” said Hale.

The SJSU cheer team currently has four male members among 13 female members. When discussing how he got into cheer, Hale explained he started in junior high and hasn’t given up his love for it since.

The decision to continue on to college cheer came after Hale witnessed an SJSU cheer practice.

“They were just about to win their second national championship so they were on fire, and I was just like, ‘I want to do this,’ ” said Hale.

Both Hale and Limosnero made it clear that they have not received any negative feedback for being a male cheerleader or coaching other males in cheer.

They view it as an important part of their lives and hope to take the skills they have learned from cheer into their futures.

“I’m all about college cheer. I’m graduating in fall 2019, but I don’t see really see myself leaving cheer,” said Hale.

Follow Roman and
Cindy on Instagram
@roaminroman_52
@cindigo

MAURICIO LA PLANTE | SPARTAN DAILY

Cheerleader Ryan Hale springs into the air and does a back tuck across the Event Center floor during the halftime performance at an SJSU basketball game.

HUMANITIES, COMMUNICATION, MATH, ENGLISH, ANTHROPOLOGY, MUSIC, MEDIA STUDIES

Second Spring

Take a GE class online with Foothill College.

6-Week Session | May 20-June 29

foothill.edu/secondspring

FOOTHILL COLLEGE

ONLINE

MUSIC, MEDIA STUDIES, ENGLISH, ACCOUNTING

Pixar's campus visit animates students

By Victoria Franco
STAFF WRITER

Derek Thompson's 14-year career with Pixar Studios led him to be part of the storyboard team of movies such as "Wall-E," "Cars 2," "Brave," "Men in Black" and "Incredibles 2."

San Jose State students, along with Thompson, were welcomed by "Shrunkenhedmen," SJSU's Animation/Illustration Club, on Tuesday.

David Chai, program coordinator for animation and illustration at SJSU, has worked with a variety of studios in the animation and illustration industry.

Chai's 25-year career allowed him to use his connections to bring Pixar employees to campus.

"These programs usually will reach out to us to do recruitment events such as this one," Chai said.

As students gathered in Yoshihiro Uchida Hall, the excitement and eagerness was apparent on their faces while they waited for the presentation.

With roughly 100 students in attendance, the floor was given to Thompson to begin his presentation about how the storyboard process works.

As raw ideas and words were placed onto a storyboard, Thompson started to think about where he wanted to go with the "Incredibles" movie and what ideas he already had.

Pixar storyboard artist Derek Thompson signs and presents a book of autographs to Shrunkenhedman Haruka Soto.

"When I started this I had five words. 'Helen, sneaks, finds big brain' is what I started 'Incredibles 2' with. And that is all I had to work with," said Thompson.

As he continued on with his presentation, he showed the audience how few words on a board led to potential questions as to what each character was doing.

Soon, those questions led him to draw "shaggy" sketches of scenes all within one working day.

After only a day of work, Thompson took those sketches into thumb positions and gave the drawings some shading.

Again, a repetition of what each scene suggested would come to mind and the progression of shots formed.

He went on to describe how the rest of the production of the sketches developed.

"A few days later I was now pitching and getting notes on what to fix in my work," Thompson said.

Thompson reminded students that work is not all business.

Within the making of scenes, some laughter is shared among workers to help brainstorm more ideas.

He explained that at one point, someone in the room questioned if Thompson's drawings would lead to Elastigirl being faced with a villain holding a hatchet, which caused a breakout of laughs in the room.

Thompson continued to take students on the journey of adding music to scenes. Sketches became more drawn out and note taking sessions cleaned up the rest of the scenes from the movie.

Before students knew it, Thompson was ready to show how his sketches transformed into the scenes from the movie.

An audience member yelled "Woah!" upon seeing the aftermath of the scene.

The seminar then opened up for the audience to ask any questions about the animation and illustration business from a Pixar worker's perspective.

Thompson was asked about what makes an applicant's portfolio stand out from others.

Thompson was quick to state what can set someone apart from the rest of the group is a unique way of showcasing his or her craft.

"We see a large number of portfolios. Ideally we want something with a personal touch. Give us a sense of who you are before we even meet you," said Thompson.

Someone in the audience who could resonate with having a standout portfolio was fourth year student Mackenzie Goff.

Goff submitted her portfolio prior to the event and was able to meet with Pixar employees to talk about her work.

"It is good to get personal advice and I got an interview with Pixar. It makes things more tangible," said Goff.

Pixar Studios will have more opportunities for students in the illustration and animation field to submit their work and possibly score an internship with them.

Follow Victoria on Twitter | @ayeeevicky

CLASSIFIEDS

CROSSWORD PUZZLE

ACROSS

- Throw out
- Beams
- Austrian peaks
- Hebrew unit of weight
- Curved molding
- Not hot
- Love intensely
- Satyr
- Unwakable state
- Deeply agitated
- Catch a glimpse of
- Card with one symbol
- Small islands
- Cue
- Washing machine cycle
- Englishman
- Counterfeits
- Wicked
- Prods
- Backside
- Captives
- Rock
- More pleasant
- The first event in a series
- Implied
- American Dental Association

- Shower alternative
- Muscle-building exercises
- River of Spain
- Gumbo
- Related to tides
- Agitate
- Central points
- Swelling under the skin
- A neutral color
- Back talk
- Adjust again

DOWN

- Quaint outburst
- A Star Wars hero
- God of love
- A heavy open wagon
- Medical care
- Scoundrel
- All excited
- "Sure"
- Contexts
- Speed up
- Not tight
- Gauderies
- Kill
- Behave

- South southeast
- Implored
- Rend
- Leave out
- Somber
- "Message received and understood"
- Angers
- No charge
- Weightlifters pump this
- Feudal worker
- Clairvoyant
- Anointings
- 3 in Roman numerals
- Sprinkle
- Lyric poem
- Small drum
- Courtyards
- Store
- Large mass of ice
- Gull-like bird
- Spheres
- Go on horseback
- Midmonth date
- Arrived
- Thin strip

SUDOKU PUZZLE

Complete the grid so that every row, column and 3x3 box contains every digit from 1 to 9 inclusively.

			9	4			6	1
	1				6
		5		1		2	8
1	6					8	3
	2	8					4	6
	3	1		9		6
			1				5
4	9			5	8

SOLUTIONS 02/12/2019

1	2	3	7	6	9	5	4	8
6	5	9	4	2	8	7	3	1
8	4	7	3	1	5	6	2	9
4	6	1	5	9	2	3	8	7
7	9	5	8	3	1	4	6	2
3	8	2	6	7	4	1	9	5
9	7	4	2	5	6	8	1	3
2	3	8	1	4	7	9	5	6
5	1	6	9	8	3	2	7	4

C	U	B	E	S				P	S	H	A	W
A	N	O	D	E				U	T	O	P	I	A	N
O	R	A	N	G	E			E	P	I	N	E	T	T	E
P	E	W		E	R	O	D	I	N	G		L	O	T
A	F	A	R					M	I	L	K		G	E	N	S
L	U	R	E		W	E	T	S		A	R	S	E
S	L	E	D		A	G	O		P	R	I	S	S
						C	E	D	A	R	B	I	R	D
		M	A	O	R	I				I	O	N		D	A	U	B
		A	L	A	R		C	A	N	T			L	U	N	A
	G	L	U	T			R	O	L	E			E	D	D	Y
	A	L	M		B	U	I	L	D	E	R		I	R	E
	D	E	N	I	A	B	L	Y				L	O	O	T	E	D
	S	T	U	M	B	L	E						L	I	N	E	S
							S	P	E	E	D			S	L	E	D	S

JOKIN' AROUND

Do you have a date for Valentine's Day?

Yes, it is February 14th.

PLACE YOUR AD HERE

Place your Classified Ads Online at Spartandaily.CampusAve.com

Contact us at 408.924.3270 or email us at SpartanDailyAdvertising@gmail.com

Visit our office at DBH 213 Office Hours: 1:30 - 4:15 P.M.

Feather frenzy takes over downtown

Photos by Alyson Chuyang, Staff Writer

Greyson Jones winds up as he prepares to swing his pillow during the Feathers of Fury pillow fight on Feb. 10.

Those who attended Feathers of Fury had an opportunity to decorate their pillows and then wage a friendly war on everyone around them.

San Jose Pillow Fight organizer Justin Triano looks over his shoulder to watch for potential pillow attacks.

Greyson was one of the numerous attendees to take part in this annual San Jose pillow fight.

San Jose Giants mascot Gigante joined in the fun at Feathers of Fury's ninth annual pillow fight in downtown San Jose.

Lucas College and Graduate School of Business

Attention
Accounting Majors!

Prepare to become a CPA.

If you are interested in a career in tax accounting, a Master of Science in Taxation (MST) is a great way to meet the 150-hour requirement to become a CPA.

- 30-unit graduate degree program
- Full-time or part-time options available

Or, if you are interested in a career in assurance or advisory, a Master of Science in Accountancy (MSA) can meet your CPA needs in our full-time, 30-unit program.

Get more information at:
www.sjsu.edu/lucasgsb/programs/mst/

SJSU SAN JOSÉ STATE UNIVERSITY

#FINAIDFEB

HAPPY FINANCIAL AID
AWARENESS MONTH!

Come visit the Financial Aid & Scholarship Office (located in the Student Services Center) this Thursday, February 14th from 10:00am-2:00pm to learn more about the financial aid process, financial literacy, and scholarships!

FREE REFRESHMENTS!